Reward offered for info on Peace Corps volunteer

CAMPBELL was last seen in Banaue

By Cynthia D. Balana and Micahi Papa

THE UNITED STATES EMBASSY IN MANILA has offered a reward to anyone who could provide information on the whereabouts of Julia Campbell, a Peace Corps volunteer who has been missing in Ifugao province since April 8.

Campbell, of Fairfax, Virginia, 40, has been a college teacher in Legazpi City in Albay since March 2005.

Embassy spokesperson Matthew Lussenhop said the Peace Corps started looking for Campbell after she missed appointments on April 11.

"Embassy security officials, Peace Corps security and local authorities are in that region right now looking for her or people who may know where she is," Lussenhop said.

The Ifugao provincial police has sent four teams headed by the police chief to join the search for Campbell.

A report from the Philippine National Police Directorate for Operations said Ifugao provincial commander Senior Supt. Pedro Gonit was leading the search.

An embassy statement described Campbell as a Caucasian American with blonde hair, 5'7" tall, 120 lbs and wearing glasses.

She was last seen on April 8 in Banaue where she reportedly intended to hike alone in a hilly area near Batad, 1.5-km east of Banaue where the famed rice terraces are located.

The embassy asked anyone who may have information on Campbell's whereabouts to contact John Soto, safety and security officer of the Peace Corps in the Philippines at (0920) 950-5275 or the US Embassy in Manila at (02) 528-6300.

Campbell is one of 137 Peace Corps volunteers currently serving in the Philippines.

More than 8,000 volunteers have served in the Philippines since 1961. With an AP report

3 hurt in airport accident

THREE PERSONS were injured yesterday when a van jumped the curb and rammed the steel railings outside the departure terminal at the Manila Domestic Airport in Pasay City.

The railings in turn were driven into the glass window of the terminal causing it to shatter and sent glass shards to hit Marcelina, 15, a Cagayan-bound Cebu Pacific passenger; Nilben Sayson, 34, of Ninth Street, Mandaluyong City; and Rafael Ragasa, 46, of Sto. Domingo, Quezon City.

Marcelina suffered a wound on her lower lip and contusions on her right cheek. Sayson and Ragasa sustained lacerations and bruises.

In a report, the Manila International Airport Authority said Leslyn Lacson, 44, of Amberville Subdivision, Dasmariñas, Cavite, arrived at the airport driving a Mitsubishi Delica at 8:19 a.m. to pick up a relative who was arriving from Iloilo City. She stopped in front of the departure terminal and entrance.

Security guard Jaylan Macatangay asked Lacson to move her van so as not to block traffic. Lacson, then, stepped on the accelerator and the van jumped over the curb and hit the railings. —Cynthia D. Balana

OPINION

Volunteer central

IT IS ALMOST AS IF THE RED CROSS IN THE Philippines was burdened with the wrong name. The first two terms of its official name—the Philippine National Red Cross—suggest that the country's leading humanitarian service organization is a government agency. It isn't.

This perception has a specific consequence: many people think that the PNRC is funded by the government. It isn't.

EDITORIAL

In truth, it depends on the generosity of donors. But despite its always-inadequate resources, the PNRC has developed a reputation for solid work in disaster management, in community health and especially in blood services; its staff members are regularly seconded to postings in other countries; and it often precedes, and sometimes outlasts, government intervention in calamity areas. It is also one of the more active members of the international Red Cross community.

According to PNRC officials, however, less than 10 percent of its funds come from corporate donors. [illegible]

[illegible]

Two of the PNRC's initiatives are worth a special mention.

Voluntary blood donation is an ambitious but necessary initiative of the Red Cross: The PNRC aims to provide 100 percent of the country's blood supply requirements, by expanding its own capacity fourfold. [illegible]

[illegible]

Project 143 Red Cross is a plan simple in conception, daring in scope: It seeks to form a nationwide corps of some 1.8 million volunteers.

[illegible]

The key lesson from volunteer success stories such as Gawad Kalinga and Grameen-type micro-finance enterprises is simple: Small is beautiful. Progress begins with small steps—one micro-loan, one house, one barangay of 43 volunteers at a time.

TALK of the TOWN

Go for eco-friendly fiesta

AN ENVIRONMENTAL GROUP HAS EXPANDED its guidelines on the holding of an earth-friendly fiesta since it came up with a list in May last year.

The EcoWaste Coalition, a network of environmental organizations, has added to its to-do list green procurement, buying of condiments in bulk and storing them in reusable bottles, adoption of a no-to-plastic bags and Styrofoam policy, use of energy efficient compact fluorescent light bulbs, and offering of homegrown flowers and plants during Mass in lieu of pesticide-laden ones.

The group wants parishioners to use canvas, coco cloth or sawali instead of PVC-coated tarpaulin in making streamers.

The coalition is also pushing for solar power energy rechargeable lamps, buying of reusable carry bags made of cloth.

All this would come to naught if the community were not involved. So the EcoWaste Coalition wants the community to be informed and excited about and engaged in celebrating an earth-friendly fiesta.

Guidelines on zero-waste celebrations

A home with a view

Small but plentiful gathering spaces make the view deck of the Gamut house at Ayala Greenfield Estates more inviting. Homeowners Erlie and Rudy Gamut often take breakfast here.

Driving up the winding road to the Gamut home is a scenic treat in itself.

Built on one of the highest points of Ayala Greenfield Estates, the Gamut home captures different facets of Laguna magic from each of its rooms.

From the view deck of the Gamut residence at Ayala Greenfield, the hustle of Makati life seems a lifetime instead of just an hour away.

Erlie and Rudy Gamut initially purchased the [illegible] sqm lot with the intention of building a vacation home to live in three months every year while on break from their main home in Fairfield, California. But the couple fell so deeply in love with their Ayala Greenfield home that they decided to make it their primary dwelling. "After staying here for a few weeks, we decided to stay for most of the year. This house reminds us of our home in Fairfield," says Erlie.

The Fairfield home they lived in for many years was located near three golf courses, so the 18-hole golf course designed by Robert Trent Jones II inside Ayala Greenfield is a good source of enjoyment for the Gamut couple. Erlie wakes up at five-thirty in the morning three times a week for a quick round with Ayala Greenfield's community golf team. After the game, she and her friends visit the [illegible] room or chat over food and drinks at the country club restaurant.

Most of the time, Erlie has little reason to leave her hilltop community, which is cooled year-round by breezes coming from Laguna de Bay. The Gamuts hardly turn on their air conditioners, she says. This is quite a change from life at the Roxas Boulevard condo they used to own, where the oppressive heat of the city left them with little choice but to keep the air conditioners running nearly twenty-four hours a day. Having grown up in Cavite, Erlie cites Ayala Greenfield's proximity to Metro Manila as a key factor in her decision to live there. The residential estate's location in Calamba, Laguna, the gateway to the booming Calabarzon region, is only fifty kilometers from Metro Manila, and thirty-five kilometers from Makati. "Had I known I would settle here for good, I would have bought a bigger lot," she says.

Ayala Greenfield Estates is a [illegible]-hectare residential and golf preserve in Calamba, Laguna. Its unique elevated location provides exceptional views of Mount Makiling, Laguna de Bay, and Tagaytay Ridge. Amidst this resplendent natural environment, world-class recreational facilities bestow Ayala Greenfield with a [illegible] country club lifestyle that its residents are able to enjoy every single day.

For further information about Ayala Greenfield Estates, please call [illegible], log on to www.ayalalandpremier.com, or email [illegible]@ayalalandpremier.com.

The split-level design of the house makes the most of its hillside location. Dramatic views are framed throughout the entry by varying window heights, sliding glass doors and numerous balconies.

The main living area of the house has towering glass walls. Small casement windows are discreetly built between the outsized glass panels to allow ventilation without obstructing the view.

Even the stair landings have striking views. An area that would otherwise be unusable helps keep the house well-lit and well-ventilated.

Homeowner [illegible] wakes up every morning to a glorious view of Mt. Makiling. Late afternoon views are even more remarkable, as the sun sets behind the mystical mountain's peak.

The bed, writing desk, and television in the third-floor guest bedroom are strategically positioned to showcase spectacular scenery. The early morning sun rising over Laguna de Bay is the main attraction of this room.

CHECK the fuse box if there's electrical failure due to a blown fuse.

CHECKING the oil level in the engine is one of the most important and easily performed maintenance tasks.

For the driving Miss Daisy

THESE DAYS, DRIVING is certainly no longer only for men. Look around and you will see women behind the wheels bravely negotiating congested [illegible] or navigating the [illegible] streets of Metro Manila.

Wanted: 'Imperfect' mothers

DOES YOUR MOM LOOK frazzled? Are her nails chipped? Does she look like she's badly in need of a back rub and a facial?

Do you remember the last time she shopped for shoes and clothes? Or has she been scrimping on herself so you can have the latest iPod or go on a Boracay holiday with your friends?

This Mother's Day, Lifestyle gives you a chance to pay back the woman who always puts your concerns before hers.

Nominate your mom for a whole day of pampering and makeover—charged to us.

While we in Lifestyle think all mothers ought to be treated like queens every day, tell us in 500 words or less why you think your mom deserves to get the royal treatment if only for a day.

Send your essay no later than April 25 via e-mail to mom_makeover@inquirer.com.ph or snail mail to Lifestyle Section, Philippine Daily Inquirer, 1098 Chino Roces Ave., Makati City. Include a recent photo of mother with her name, age and occupation. Don't forget to write your name, address and contact number.

Four winning moms will spend a day in a Metro Manila mall picking out a new outfit each. A whole day of pampering and makeover at selected salons will follow. Best of all, it will be our honor and our pleasure to publish the photographs of the winners with their new look in Sunday Lifestyle on Mother's Day.
